WHO ATTENDS
Mid-level managers and executives, primarily at the director or vice president-level from across various sectors and industries. Participants currently lead teams with operational, business unit, or line responsibilities, and are identified as likely to move up within their organizations.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM
The Mid-level Executive Program moves women leaders out of the critical mid-career level, setting them on an upward trajectory. Women who attend this program gain the tools to move forward from their success in management — the management of projects and tasks — to true leadership: inspiring and leading others to perform.

Participants learn from world-class faculty and through the exchange of stories and ideas between women leaders from different industries and organizations around the world. Participants discover the value of reflection and work to understand who they are as leaders at work, at home, and within their communities.

LEADERSHIP IMPACT
Focused on developing the “whole leader,” the Mid-level Executive Program delivers a blend of professional, organizational, and personal development sessions with an underlying theme of advanced strategic leadership thinking.

Participants learn to:
- Reflect on their unique leadership style and understand what it means to shift from manager to leader
- Apply new strategies to drive innovation, creativity, and optimal team performance
- Learn how to maximize health, enhance well-being, and build a network of peers for sustainable career advancement

“`It was an excellent program that I fully enjoyed` and will highly recommend. It had pieces that I can apply both professionally and personally and I can use pieces of every single session, which is pretty rare these days. Very well done!`”

- Senior Manager, PMO, Medical Devices

PROGRAM INFORMATION
- Dates: June 17 – 22, 2018
- Fee by March 1: $9,200 USD
  After March 1: $9,500 USD
- Location: Smith College, Northampton, MA
- Contact: leadership@smith.edu
  +1-413-585-2642

execed.smith.edu/mep-program